FEBRUARY IS BLACK HISTORY MONTH

BLACK RESOURCE CENTER COORDINATOR ON THE IMPORTANCE AND DIFFERENCES OF BHM IN 2021

“Black History Month is more than recognizing the struggles Blacks/African Americans faced in this country. It is a celebration of many accomplishments and achievements. In the words of the late Maya Angelou: ‘You can’t really know where you are going until you know where you have been.’ The road has not been easy but each day we are making strides and taking our rightful place in this world.

“This year’s Black History Month will look a little different due to Covid-19 restrictions. However, our passion and drive for creating a culturally enriching experience is unwavering. This year’s theme is ‘The Black Family: Representation, Identity, and Diversity.’ The dynamics of the Black family has changed but still proves to be a vision of strength. We will have virtual talks that will educate and inspire, we will dance, and we will have conversations that are good for the soul. I encourage everyone to join the Black History Month virtual experience. You’ll be glad that you did.”

SIUC ARCHAEOLOGICAL FIELD SCHOOL INVESTIGATES THE LIVES OF PEOPLE OF COLOR LIVING IN A PRE-CIVIL WAR FREED SLAVE COMMUNITY IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

For the past several years the SIUC Anthropology Department archaeological field school class (Anthropology 496) has been assisting the Shawnee National Forest in investigating the archaeological remains of a freed slave community called Miller Grove that was established in the 1840s on what is now Forest Service land in Pope County, Illinois.

Abby Miller and her daughters, ca. 1900. Abby was married to Bedford Miller, the son of one of the community founders.

Miller Grove is a nationally important site that was established by several groups of newly-freed peoples from Tennessee prior to the Civil War including the Miller family. Rather than a town, Miller Grove consisted of a series of farms linked together by dirt trails with the focus of the community being a church/school and cemetery. Based on information collected from community descendants by the Forest Service over the years, the Miller Grove families were heavily involved in helping fugitives from the South escape to freedom via the Underground Railroad. Two natural landmarks associated with this endeavor – Sand Cave, a large, one-room cave in which runaways were sheltered before they could be moved, and Crow Knob, a bare sandstone promontory used as a lookout station to watch for runaway slaves and slave catchers who might be pursuing them, still form part of the present day-landscape.

The Forest Service has been heavily involved in investigating the remains of the Miller Grove community for over the last 20 years, locating the remains of the individual homesteads and conducting archaeological investigations to recover information regarding the lives of the people who lived at them. Literally thousands of volunteers from across the country, including schoolchildren as well as senior citizens, have participated in these investigations, helping recover hundreds of thousands of items that provide information regarding the lives of the families in this silenced community whose story can now be told only through archaeology.

Starting in 2017 the SIUC Anthropology Department and the SIUC Center for Archaeological Investigations began helping the Forest Service in their investigations of Miller Grove through the six week-long summer archaeological field school class (Anthropology 496). The goal is to help bring this project to a conclusion, which involves analyzing and interpreting all the archaeological and historical data collected to date, nominating Miller Grove to the National Register of Historic Places (NRHP), and conducting further landscape and archaeological studies as needed that will aid in its preservation. Because of the coronavirus, a major aspect of the 2021 SIU archaeological field school investigations will include learning how to analyze and curate the Miller Grove artifacts recovered to date at the Center for Archaeological Investigations (CAI) curation facility in Carbondale, at which wearing masks and social distancing will be required. The group also will visit the site of Miller Grove in accompaniment with Forest Service archaeologists if possible.

PROFESSOR NAJJAR ABDUL-MUSAWWIR SPEAKS ON AFRICAN ART AND SIU CARBONDALE

“I have been on several trips to Africa. I have been to Ghana, Senegal and South Africa,” Abdul-Musawwir said. “The trips have been eye opening and have given me the opportunity to see what is true of the things I have heard about Africa. I experienced that for myself. One of the greatest things about it was the great historical connection between some of the things I learned in those African countries and in relation to the African American community here in America.”

Abdul-Musawwir found similarities between African culture and African American culture, including long-standing traditions.

“The similarity between the ideas of family structures and principles with African Americans in early America is striking. There was a deprivation of that amongst African Americans from slavery here in the United States, from having a family structure,” Abdul-Musawwir said. “Looking at how Africa has continued to find ways, and how African Americans have continued to find ways, to build a structure despite the systematic exploitation of our culture. For marriage, we think about ‘jumping the broom,’ for New Year’s, we eat black eyed peas and other certain types of food, we have our own national anthem—the Black national anthem—as well as the American national anthem.”

Stamps which Professor Abdul-Musawwir brought back from Ghana in 1999 and gifted them to the African American Museum of Southern Illinois.

The School of Art and Design at SIU has also brought support in the form of recruitment and retention.

“I have had the opportunity to reach out and encourage, not only in terms of graduate but also undergraduate, enrollment,” Abdul-Musawwir said. “We have been very fortunate over the years to encourage African Americans to be interested in our well-respected art program.”

Professor Najjar Abdul-Musawwir explained that his drive to aid the community comes from his belief that the service is about giving back.

“Sometimes I have to get past me and realize that my service to humanity is my way of paying rent on Earth,” Abdul-Musawwir said.

Abdul-Musawwir said that SIU Carbondale (SIU) has brought international artists to the community, which has helped local places like the Eurma C. Hayes Center by increasing community interaction.

“The School of Art and Design at SIU has been very involved and willing to be involved with the African American/Black community,” Abdul-Musawwir said.

The African sculpture form of the three figures was carved from a single piece of wood. It represents unity.

BLACK TRAILBLAZERS OF SIU CARBONDALE 1876-2004

FROM THE ARCHIVES OF SEYMOUR BRYSON, PH.D.

Diversity is an integral part of SIU Carbondale's legacy, dating to the inaugural class of 143 that included two Black students. Listed below are many of the Black trailblazers throughout the history of the university.

1876 Alexander Lane became the first Black male student graduate at what was then called Southern Illinois Normal University.

1925 With 43 members, the university's first Black student organization is chartered. The Dunbar Society sponsors literary, athletic and social events.

1930 The Dunbar Society's annual Abraham Lincoln Birthday Program is well received by the full student body. Society members form a second organization, a choral group called the Roland Hayes Club.

1932 Sigma Gamma Rho is the first Black sorority on campus.

1934 Alpha Phi Alpha is chartered as a Black fraternity on campus.

1936 Membership in the Dunbar Society reaches 57 students, making it the fourth largest student organization on campus.

1938 Eugene Payton, track star, is the first Black to be elected as captain of a sports team.

1943 University President Roscoe Pulliam insists on combining the Homecoming dances – one white, one black – into an integrated event, overcoming the objections of some city residents. "This first social gathering of both colored and white students at Southern proved to be quite successful," says the yearbook.

1951 Dowdell Hall opens as integrated men's housing and is followed in two years by Woody Hall, the first integrated dorm for women.

1953 Harvey Welch is the first Black to be awarded a varsity letter in men's basketball.

Dick Gregory is the first Black to receive the Hinkley Award.

1955 Bill Norwood is the first Black to quarterback the football team.

Dwight Campbell is elected first Black student body president.

Carl Anderson is hired as the first Black resident fellow.

SIU recruiters travel across the state offering pre-college advisement at predominantly Black high schools. An agreement is set up with Howard University to recruit its students for SIU's graduate program in college student administration.

1957 Annette Hoage is the first Black to receive a faculty appointment.

1959 SIU closes the decade with minority enrollment averaging 6 – 9 percent in total enrollment, higher than other non-urban public Illinois universities.

1960 The all Black Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity wins the scholarship trophy for the highest grade-point average among fraternities.

Nebraska Mayes is the first Black to receive a Ph.D. in Higher Education Administration.

1967 Hazel I. Scott is the first Black to be elected Homecoming queen.

Jerry Lacey is the first Black to be appointed Director of University Services.

1968 Paul Henry is the first Black assistant basketball coach.

The Black American Studies Program is founded and is later offered as a minor.

Jim Rosser is the first Black director of the Black American Studies Program.

Jim Rosser is the first Black to be appointed special assistant to President McVicar.

Harold Bardo is the first Black to be appointed as an instructor in educational psychology and as the first academic counselor in intercollegiate athletic department.

1969 Seymour Bryson is the first Black to be appointed to direct the Developmental Skills Program.

1970 Stanley Smith is the first Black dean of the College of Human Resources.

With 3,000 Black students, SIU is among the top five colleges and universities in the nation in the number of minorities enrolled. Three out of five receive some form of financial aid.

1972 Students establish the Black Affairs Council as an undergraduate student organization.

BLACK TRAILBLAZERS OF SIU CARBONDALE 1876-2004

1973 Kappa Alpha Psi's annual Kappa Karnival attracts 12,000 – 14,000 people from across the country, making it one of the largest social events for Black students in the United States.

1974 Cliff Harper is appointed the first Black dean of the Academic Support Service.

Gayle Sayers is appointed the first Black director of Men's Intercollegiate Athletics.

Bill Berry is the first Black to be appointed as SIU Board of Trustee member.

1976 Seymour Bryson is the first Black to be appointed associate dean in the College of Human Resources.

1980 Norma Ewing is the first Black to be appointed chair of the Department of Special Education.

Michael Williams is the first Black to be named budget director.

Art Cox is the first Black to be appointed director of the School of Social Work.

1987 Harvey Welch, Jr. is appointed vice president for Student Affairs, becoming the university's first Black vice president.

1988 Seymour Bryson is the first Black to be appointed executive assistant to the president.

Benjamin Shepherd is the first Black to be named vice president for academic affairs and research.

1989 SIU President John C. Guyon receives the Image Award from the Carbondale Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

1991 Sonya Locke is the first Black to be appointed varsity head volleyball coach.

1992 Carol Henry is the first Black female to be appointed budget director.

2001 Connie Price is the first Black to be appointed head women's track coach.

2003 Peter Alexander is the first Black to be appointed dean of the School of Law.

2004 Chris Lowery is the first Black to be appointed head coach of SIU basketball.

TRAINING DESCRIPTIONS

Anti-Racism/Anti-Bias Level 1

This training will provide a historical journey through systemic and institutionalized racism in our country and will provide a detailed understanding of what racism looks like in the classroom. This training then provides details on how to become a better ally and ways to challenge beliefs, stigmas and bias. This training is 2 hours, offered in-person and online and is open to staff and students.

Allyship for the LGBTQ+ Community: How to Use Pronouns

This training will explore gender in a diverse context, including explaining the importance of proper pronoun usage. This training is meant to teach cisgender, heterosexual folks how to use pronouns in an effective and kind way - in a safe space that allows for messing up, asking questions, and generating a collaborative learning environment. This training is facilitated by LGBTQ+ folks and will be discussion based. You will learn ways to remember pronouns, practice using gender neutral pronouns such as they/them, and learn tips for practicing allyship and inclusivity.

Anti-Racism/Anti-Bias Level 2 – Staff or Students

This training is meant for those that have already taken Anti-Racism/Anti-Bias level 1 and want to learn above and beyond that curriculum. This training will be more discussion based and provide the opportunity to ask in-depth questions in order to facilitate a better understanding of what it means to practice anti-racist allyship. This training will provide specific, practical suggestions via case analysis.

Diversity & Inclusivity Level 1

This is a basic training on concepts of diversity, privilege, power, intersectionality, and allyship. This training will provide information and education as well as opportunities to discuss how diversity and inclusivity apply to your context. This training is for both staff and students.

Discussing White Privilege: What is it, what does it mean, and what should we do with it?

This training is a discussion-based training that is geared towards White students. The purpose of this training is to learn more about what White privilege is, why it's important, and what to do with it. This training will allow folks the opportunity to ask questions and learn in a safe space. The goal is to grow in our own understanding of our privilege and to learn how to use our privilege in order to practice anti-racist allyship. This training is open only to students; future sessions will be held for staff. This training is in person in SSB room 150/160. The cap is 20 students and students MUST register before attending.

Diversity & Inclusivity Level 2 - Staff

This training is meant for those that have already taken Diversity & Inclusivity Level 1 and want to learn above and beyond that curriculum. This training will focus on practical ways to practice allyship for minority communities, specifically LGBTQ+ folks, people of color, and the disabled community. This discussion-based training will provide the opportunity to ask questions, and learn tangible, specific skills via case analysis. This training is for staff only.

Ableism in Higher Education

This training will provide information about specific ways professors/ instructors can practice inclusivity for their students who have disabilities. This training will provide information about practical steps professors can take to make syllabi and classroom content more inclusive, as well as provide information about resources on campus that their students can access. This training is meant to provide skills, and allow instructors the opportunity to ask questions, learn about the disabled community, and acquire skills for practicing allyship. Instructors will leave with an attachment that can be added to course syllabi that gives information about campus resources for students with disabilities. This training will be in person in SSB room 150/160 and is limited to 20 people. Registration is required.
